

[PROVISIONAL TRANSLATION FROM PERSIAN]

[Translator's notes appear in square brackets]

[Personal information has been redacted.]

[The excerpt below is from the section of the article that pertains to the Baha'i Faith]

[Adapted from website:] Farda News

[Date:] 27 Bahman 1387 [15 Feb 2009]

Teaching Baha'ism in the Nation's Schools

In the final stage of their efforts, in order to validate the activities [confirm the membership?] of individuals who have newly-joined [the Baha'is], a number of parties are held in the homes of Baha'i students, at which a senior missionary also attends in order to familiarize these [newly-joined] individuals with certain specialized programs according to the area of their interest.

Bulletin: Baha'i students are inviting other students in various schools in the provinces of Hamadan, Fars, Isfahan, and Yazd to join the perverse Baha'i sect.

These students are distributing leaflets published in Israel, especially for youth, to introduce the Baha'i faith as the simplest and holiest religion. Through this method they try to provide their fellow students with a general understanding of their religion.

In the next stage, certain Bluetooth files containing talks by the leaders of this perverse sect are transmitted to the students' mobile phones.

Finally, they hold parties at Baha'i students' homes to validate the activities [confirm the membership?] of individuals who have newly-joined [the Baha'is], also attended by a senior missionary, and provide [these students with] certain specialized programs according to the area of their interest.

Also, they identify underprivileged students and [then] pay their tuitions and some of their families' expenses, as a way of attracting them to the Baha'i sect.