Today the Iranian political envoys to Asia and Australasia met with Ayatollah Mousavi Ardebili, the head of the Supreme Court...

...He then commented on the importance of acquainting the foreign countries with the Islamic Revolution, and said, "I think we have not been able to fully present our Islamic Revolution to the world. Of course, there have been some obstacles in relation to this. The world hegemonic propagations, and the actions of the enemies, the Baha'is, and anti-revolutionaries against this Revolution have all been factors in preventing the recognition of other countries of the Islamic Revolution. The envoys of the Islamic Republic of Iran must strive, regardless of all these difficulties, to present this Revolution to the world..."
